

For each sub-determinant, methods able to change that sub-determinant can be selected using psychological theory, by first determining of which determinant the sub-determinant is a part, and then identifying methods for that determinant